

AUTOMATED MARKET ANALYSIS REPORT

Asset: ^GSPC (S&P 500 Index) | Generated: June 07, 2026 | 05:33 PM UTC

1. CURRENT MARKET TREND

The market exhibited a strong bullish trend from mid-May, peaking at 7609.77 on June 2nd, demonstrating consistent higher highs and higher lows. However, the last three trading sessions, particularly the sharp decline on June 5th, indicate a significant reversal. This recent price action has negated much of the preceding rally, suggesting a shift to a short-term bearish momentum and a loss of prior bullish control.

2. KEY STRUCTURAL LEVELS

- * Critical Support: The immediate and crucial support zone is identified between 7333 (May 19th low) and 7353 (May 19th close). The market closed just above this level at 7383.74 on June 5th.
- * Minor Support: The intra-day low of June 5th at 7368.62 acts as the first reference point for today's trading.
- * Immediate Resistance: Initial overhead resistance is likely at 7516 (June 4th open) and further at 7553 (June 3rd close), marking levels where sellers previously took control.
- * Major Resistance: The prior peak and significant resistance zone remains around 7610-7620.

3. MORNING OPENING OUTLOOK

Given the strong bearish close on June 5th, the market is likely to open with continued downward pressure. The critical focus will be on the 7333-7353 support zone. A hold above this level might invite a short-term bounce or consolidation. Conversely, a decisive break below 7333 would confirm the bearish continuation, opening the path for further downside. Any initial rally towards 7516 should be treated as a potential retest of resistance and a selling opportunity unless robust buying volume emerges. The near-term outlook is bearish, favoring a cautious approach.